VACANCY
SAJE ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Since its inception in 1925, the South African Journal of Economics (SAJE) has established a reputation as one of the leading international regional journals, publishing economics research affecting African countries for a worldwide audience. The SAJE has a long and distinguished history, ranking amongst the oldest generalist journals in economics. The journal's current impact factor is 2.136.

In terms of editorial focus, the journal remains a generalist journal covering all fields in economics, but with a particular focus on developmental and African contexts. Toward this end, the editorial policy of the SAJE emphasizes scholarly work on developing countries, with African and Southern African development challenges receiving particular attention. The journal will further look to promote theoretical developments, methodological innovations and empirical analyses that reflect the aforementioned contexts and the policy challenges they pose.

The Economic Society of South Africa (ESSA) invites applications to join the editorial board of the journal as an Associate Editor. We are seeking individuals capable of supporting our focus areas through their network of researchers, as well as their expertise. The typical demands of an Associate Editor includes managing a certain number of articles each year and attending editorial board meetings. A small monthly honorarium is paid to Associate Editors in recognition of the public service they provide.

If you are interested in working with us to continue to raise the journal's profile, please, submit a CV and motivation letter to the current Managing Editor, Prof Steve Koch (steve.koch@up.ac.za). Please feel free to contact Prof Koch on the same address should you want more information about the position first. We look forward to receiving many good applications.

Yours sincerely,

Heinrich Bohlmann
ESSA President
